

Sorkin bio in brief (137 words)

Andrew Ross Sorkin is an award-winning journalist for The New York Times and a co-anchor of CNBC's Squawk Box. Sorkin is also the founder and editor at large of DealBook, a news site published by the Times. He is the author of the best-selling book Too Big to Fail: The Inside Story of How Wall Street and Washington Fought to Save the Financial System and Themselves, which chronicled the events of the 2008 financial crisis. Sorkin co-produced an HBO adaptation of the book, which was nominated for 11 Emmy Awards. He is also co-creator of Showtime's drama series Billions. He has won numerous journalistic honors, including two Gerald Loeb Awards, and is a member of the Council on Foreign Relations. He started writing for the Times in 1995, while still in high school.

Sorkin bio in full (494 words)

Andrew Ross Sorkin is an award-winning journalist for The New York Times and a co-anchor of Squawk Box, CNBC's signature morning program. He is also the founder and editor-at-large of DealBook, an online daily financial report with more than 1 million subscribers that he started in 2001.

Sorkin is the author of "Too Big to Fail: How Wall Street and Washington Fought to Save the Financial System — and Themselves" (Viking, 2009), which chronicled the events of the 2008 financial crisis. The book won the 2010 Gerald Loeb Award for Best Business Book, and was shortlisted for the 2010 Samuel Johnson Prize and the 2010 Financial Times Business Book of the Year Award. The book spent more than six months on The New York Times Best Seller list in hardcover and paperback. The book was adapted as a movie HBO Films in 2011. Sorkin was a co-producer of the film, which was nominated for 11 Emmy Awards.

Sorkin is also co-creator of the drama series "Billions" on Showtime. He has several new film and television projects in development.

Sorkin is one the preeminent interviewers in the nation, known for his incisive, nuanced long-form conversations with the biggest newsmakers in the world, from Elon Musk to LeBron James to Kim Kardashian and Hillary Clinton. Just this year, he won the EMMY award for "Outstanding Live Interview."

This fall, Sorkin will host a new limited streaming interview series for NBC that will be broadcast on NBC News Now and will be available on demand on Peacock, YouTube, NBCNews.com, as well as platforms like Pluto TV, Samsung TV Plus, The Roku Channel and NBC News' apps on Roku, Fire TV and Apple TV.

Sorkin is one of the preeminent interviewers in the nation, known for his incisive, nuanced long-form conversations with the biggest newsmakers in the world, from Elon Musk to LeBron James to Kim Kardashian and Hillary Clinton. In 2022, he was nominated for an Emmy award for Outstanding Live Interview.

Over the years, Sorkin has broken news of many of the most consequential business and policy headlines in the country, from the largest mergers and acquisitions to the most significant changes in the tax code.

As a leading voice about Wall Street and corporate America, Sorkin is a frequent guest on national television and radio programs, as well as a lecturer at universities across the country. He has appeared on NBC's "Today Show," PBS's "NewsHour," HBO's "Real Time with Bill Maher," NPR's "Talk of the Nation," and many others.

He won a Gerald Loeb Award in 2004 for breaking the news of I.B.M.'s historic sale of its PC business to Lenovo. He was also a finalist in the commentary category for his DealBook column. He also won a Society of American Business Editors and Writers Award for breaking news in 2005 and again in 2006. In 2007, the World Economic Forum named him a Young Global Leader. Sorkin is co-chair of The New York Public Library's Business Leadership Council and a member of the Council on Foreign Relations.

Sorkin began writing for The Times in 1995 under unusual circumstances: he hadn't yet graduated from high school. Sorkin is a graduate of Cornell University.

Last updated: Sept 2022